Brand STORY

I sat in the corner giggling as my cousins got in trouble. As I sat thinking I had gotten away with my crimes, I heard my grandmother say, "Go get Dethra; I know she was behind all of this." She was right, I was the mastermind, and at that moment, with the influence of some physical correction from grandma, I understood my voice had power, and I could influence other's actions.

In my senior year of high school, I took my first economics course, where I learned about the stock market. I ran to my mother and asked for $1000 to invest in stocks. I had just was not wealthy, to give me $1000. She did, and in 1994 I invested $1000 in Apple, IBM, and Home Depot. Yes, those stocks have done very well for my mother. I then learned the financial impact of my influence. With only my words and solid direction, I could help people turn limited resources into abundant provisions. I then knew that I had a calling. I was here to change lives and transform companies by giving them the tools to take what was just Ok and make it great.

After starting in the non-profit arena, going to corporate and ending my career in academia as the head of HR and Administration, I realized that my impact should not be exclusive to one organization. I wanted to affect an international audience. I desired to influence people worldwide to invest in themselves and their companies to get exponential returns.

In 2007, I started ExecuPrep and was able to leave the corporate world and take my impact worldwide. Because of my education and track record of success, companies trusted me with their people strategy. They allowed me to build systems, processes, and programs that elevated their high performing/high potential employees to the level of productivity and performance that made their bottom-line expand. Businesses leaders trust me as a human capital strategist that will help them get the greatest return on the investment in their people. I am passionate about transforming companies by helping them tap into and make wise investments in the organization's talent.
